MIAMI, FL – Oliver Gal, a Miami-based decorative wall art company, will open a new showroom at the Fall 2023 High Point Market as part of the brand's expansion.

"Oliver Gal has previously been recognized for its visionary art work and excellence on the consumer-focused level," said Ana Sanchez Gal, CEO and co-founder of Oliver Gal. "We are excited to introduce interior designers, retailers and art connoisseurs alike to the Oliver Gal story of enriching living spaces as well as that of enhancing businesses with artistry curations for clients and customers of every style preference."

The opening of the showroom will focus on the contributions and artistry of chief creative, Lola Sanchez. Sanchez and her concepts will be featured throughout the showroom. She has been instrumental in defining the brand's approach to art as "going beyond aesthetic and making a conscious, positive impact", according to Gal.

"Our latest collection aims to blur the lines between wall art and self-expression," said Sanchez. "We envision our wall pieces as an extension of our customers' personality, transforming their spaces into a canvas that reflects their unique journey. Sustainability is deeply rooted in our design and manufacturing process ensuring our art pieces contribute to a healthier planet as much as they do to transforming spaces."

Founded in 2011 by sisters Ana and Lola Sanchez, Oliver Gal combines local Florida craftsmen's artisanal skills with their clientele's personalized aesthetic and sensibilities, using a palette of materials, including feathers, moss, vibrant paints, and a range of textured glitter.

"Interior design professionals and retailers attending the High Point Market can anticipate an elevated and unconventional original art collection that offers innovation, sustainability and statement making elements," said Todd Skorupski, sales and art director for Oliver Gal.
